Chief Minister Laxmikant Parsekar on Friday launched e-suvidha online portal for tracking government as well as private investment projects in one place.

The system developed by the National Informatics Centre (NIC) will allow the government to ‘at-a-glance’ have an overview of the projects in the State and see at what stage of completion they are.

Parsekar said, “It is a wonderful method to expedite the process of investment. I think the State will greatly benefit. Even if there are protests against projects, various authorities will have the status of the project right before them and will be in a better position to answer any query”.

A project proponent will have to upload the project

E-SUVIDHA: FUTURE PERFECT

- A project proponent has to upload the project onto the portal; if he encounters any problem, he could upload queries too which would be attended at the highest level.

- CM can directly monitor the status of projects and see what is holding them back.

- The portal can be used to monitor both government projects like Mandovi and Zuari bridges as well as private projects like hotels, eco tourism, etc.

- Onto the portal and if he encounters any problem, he
