eGovWatch: Haryana government launches e-PMS to expedite stalled projects

By FTI on February 10, 2015

Haryana government has rolled out a comprehensive online Projects Management System (e-PMS) to fast track stalled projects, involving investment over Rs 50 crore.

It was launched by Haryana Chief Secretary D S Dhesi today, said an official release.

The e-PMS automates entire tracking from submission of new projects till their commissioning.

The implementation of e-PMS Haryana will help the state to enhance the efficiency and to bring transparency in projects execution, it said.

This will also boost the confidence of investor and will help in reviving the investment cycle.

Further the e-PMS will eliminate unnecessary human intervention and will improve the communication between Industries and Government (I2G), State and Centre (G2G), or vice versa, it further said.

In the first instance, 16 key departments of Haryana including Revenue and Disaster Management, Power, Panchayats, Industries, Mines and Geology, PWD (B&R), Health, Town and Country Planning, Agriculture, have been identified for implementation of ePMs for all the projects, involving investments over Rs 50 crore, in respect of their sectors or areas of operations.
